SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 8. 1740. No. 1680.

I Hope the Gentleman to whom I acknowledge myself extremely obliged for the under-written Letter will excuse its not having been publiſhed ſooner. I perſwade myſelf it is not too late now; and that the Candour with which he has treated this Subject will give the ſame Satisfaction to our Readers, as it has to their moſt obliged Servant.

R. FREEMAN.

To the Liverymen of the City of London.

Brethren and Fellow Citizens,

IT is near Thirty Years ſince I became a Liveryman of the City of London, and do now venture to declare in Print, what I have always done in Converſation, that no Merchant, Common-council-man, or other Trader, hath more its Peace and Proſperity at heart, or been more honeſtly and zealouſly attach'd to its true Intereſts, Rights, and Privileges, than myſelf. It is purely upon this Principle that I addreſs you at this Time; a Time when your own Intereſts, and the general Intereſt of your Country, claim your more immediate Care and Attention; and upon which the Welfare and Happineſs of yourſelves and your Poſterity, apparently and critically depend. As Peace and Unanimity is the juſt and natural Baſis of all Society, ſo Diſcord muſt evidently be allow'd a Corruption: And we are not wanting to know the unhappy Inſtances and fatal Conſequences of ſuch Diſcords, which have been perverted, and almoſt deſtroyed, that Unanimity amongſt us, which every Man ſeems to conclude for. It cannot therefore but be a very great Grief and Affliction to every honeſt and impartial Mind, to ſee Men give themſelves up implicitly to their Paſſions, and to run, quite retrograde as it were, to what is manifeſtly and eſſentially contrary not only to their Duty, but alſo to their Reaſon and real Intereſt. The many great and invaluable Rights and Privileges you enjoy, under the moſt excellent and well-regulated Conſtitution perhaps upon Earth, are in themſelves (I ſincerely agree with you) of that great Weight and Importance, that you cannot be too zealous and active in their Defence and Preſervation: But let us conſider coolly, in the firſt Place, what it is we are doing; let us be very cautious that we are neither miſled nor miſtaken herein, and not put them upon fallacious and wrong Principles; let us be careful that we grow not wanton with our Proſperity, leſt thro' Freedom we become Factious, and miſuſe the Liberties we enjoy by running unguardedly into a Spirit of Deluſion and Licentiouſneſs. Let us calmly and maturely conſider the Situation in which we ſtand, who are our natural Friends, and who our moſt inveterate avow'd Enemies; and effectually put ourſelves upon our Guard againſt the Craft and Subtlety of wicked and deſigning Men, who envy the Peace of the Nation, and by falſe Arts and ſpecious Pretences for their own private Ends and Purpoſes, are endeavouring to bring about our Ruin: Reaſon and Experience will be your beſt Monitors in this Caſe, and be ſufficient if properly attended to, by which you may make to yourſelves a right Rule for your Government. ——Let not Names and Sounds deceive you; they are the Engines of Malice and Diſappointment, by which Factious and Ambitious Men delude the Weak, the Honeſt, and the Unwary, and by which only they can be able to make them the Inſtruments of their own Deſtruction. To divide and rule is a Sovereign Charm with the Incendiary of every Kind and Denomination; and the many unhappy Changes with which Hiſtories abound, flow naturally from this dangerous and polluted Source. Subtlety and baſe Inſinuations gave to him the original Character of being the Father of Lies, who from his Pride and Ambition durſt even to attempt to dethrone the Almighty. There can be no ſerious and good Man (my Fellow-Citizens) who wiſheth well to our happy Conſtitution in Church and State, and to the Trade and Glory of this Great and Weal by Metropolis, but muſt behold with Grief and Reſentment the preſent unhappy Differences and Commotions which prevail amongſt us; at a Time when the Nation is engag'd in a foreign War, as well for the Increaſe and Preſervation of your Trade, the Defence and Vindication of its own Honour, and the juſt Rights and Properties of your Fellow-Subjects; at a Time when his Sacred Majeſty, like a true Father of his People, hath ſo earneſtly and affectionately recommended Peace and Unanimity; when the Legiſlature is taking the moſt vigorous and moſt effectual Meaſures to do you Juſtice. Plain Senſe and Common Prudence bids you to be united, and to ſtand faſt together: What Occaſion is there for reviving of invidious Names, and unreaſonable and dangerous Diſtinctions; mere Phantoms in reality, which, if ever there was the leaſt Truth in them ſhould no longer ſubſiſt, and which can ſerve to no other Purpoſe than to weaken the Hands of the Adminiſtration, to throw the State into Convulſions, and to give Advantage to the Common Enemy both at Home and Abroad. As theſe Diviſions of yours viſibly took their Riſe from ſome indirect Artifices which were ſet on Foot this Time Twelvemonth, in order to influence you in your Choice of a Lord-Mayor, I ſhall be ſo free as to confeſs unto you, that I did upon no Account approve of the Methods that were then taken in ſetting aſide the Alderman next the Chair, as it was a Breach of the Publick Peace and Harmony of the City, and as I foreſaw that in all Probability it would be attended with an Increaſe of future Factions and Diſorders. That you have a Power and Right of chooſing your Chief Magiſtrate is inconteſtable, nor can you be blameable upon all proper Occaſions to vindicate and aſſert it: But I could not be of Opinion with thoſe who would inſiſt upon its being either reaſonable or neceſſary at that Time, and could heartily have wiſh'd that thoſe of my Brethren who thought otherwiſe, would however have behav'd upon that Occaſion with ſomewhat more Temper and Decency.

I ſhall not enter more particularly into the Merits of that Affair, than only to beg that you would take a ſerious and modeſt Review of it, and then calmly determine with yourſelves, whether you believe it really conſiſtent either with your Intereſt or Duty? In the naked and diſpaſſionate State that I ſee and conſider Things, I muſt ingenuouſly own to you, that I know not how to reconcile it. You will forgive me if I ſhould ask you, Whence proceeded this ſtrange Oppoſition; or, What was the plain and manifeſt Deſign of it? Was it not, in fact, putting a Negative upon the whole Legiſlature (a Reſtraint which in ſome Caſes you have declar'd yourſelves very far from approving); upon a Power to which we are naturally ſubject, and which in common Modeſty we are at leaſt to ſuppoſe to be equally wiſe, judicious, and every way incorrupt, as thoſe of our own Body; a Power equally imbark'd with you both in Intereſt and Property, and who, as they had a much better Opportunity of fully acquainting themſelves with the true Nature and Situation of Things, ſhould undoubtedly be allow'd to be the moſt natural and proper Judges of them? Theſe, Sirs, are Practices which are inconſiſtent, I think, with the Principles of true Government, and tend to no leſs than the inverting your Conſtitution, viz. by making your C——n C——l the dernier Reſort of the Rights and Privileges of Britons. I would not, my good Fellow-citizens, be ſo underſtood, as that Governments may not take wrong Steps ſometimes, and that whenever it manifeſtly appears to do ſo, that it may not be your Duty modeſtly to object to, and remonſtrate againſt it; no, it is not in the Nature of the wiſeſt and juſteſt Intentions to be always perfect: all I contend for is, that you keep a proper Check and Caution upon your Judgment and Temper in theſe Caſes, and that you be well aſſured of the Injury, before you take upon you to recriminate; and even then too, that it be done with ſuch a Spirit of Moderation and Submiſſion, as becomes reaſonable Men and good Subjects. I ſhall not inquire to what or to whom this Turn of Thinking hath been principally owing, nor by whoſe peculiar Management you have been thrown into this Ferment, whether from the private Views of any factious and ambitious Magiſtrate, or from any other Junto of Men, who thro' Deſign, or from Party Malice, affect to ride and govern you at their Pleaſure: From whatever Men, or whatever Motives it hath proceeded, a common Degree of Prudence, I think, will direct us upon all Occaſions, to ſhun and avoid every Ringleader of Sedition and Diſloyalty; remembring, that whatever hath a Tendency to contradict and diſturb the Peace and Order of any Society, is eſſentially oppoſite to the Happineſs and Proſperity of it. It is with the moſt ſincere, and moſt affectionate Goodwill, which one Heart can poſſibly have for the Intereſt and Advantage of all others, that I have ventur'd to give you my Sentiments at this Time with great Freedom and Candour; they come, I aſſure you, from one who hath lived a pretty long time in the World, unaw'd and uninfluenc'd by any Man or Set of Men whatſoever, and who hath always endeavour'd to govern himſelf, to the beſt of his Judgment, by the ſole Dictates of Reaſon and Truth; from one who is really what he profeſſes himſelf, a Liveryman of London, and whoſe Intereſt he is, both in Duty and Inclination, bound faithfully to ſupport and maintain, as far as it ſhall appear conſiſtent with the General Peace and Welfare of his Country. I am,

Gentlemen,

Your moſt affectionate Brother,

CIVES LONDINENSIS.

Yeſterday arriv'd the two Mails due from Holland, two from Flanders, and two from France.

THE Advices from Peterſburg, which are of the 11th ult O. S. confirm our former Account of the Czarina's having ſettled the Succeſſion to the Crown of Ruſſia upon her Grand-Nephew Prince Ivan or John, the Infant Son of the Princeſs Ann of Mecklenburgh and Anthony Ulrick Duke of Brunſwick-Lunenburgh; with theſe farther Particulars: That on the 6th the Senate met to ratify the ſaid Settlement, and at the ſame time drew up the Form of an Oath to be taken by all the Subjects of the Empire; that next Day the Senate and all the Miniſters and Generals, together with the Princeſs Ann and her Husband the Duke of Brunſwick, aſſembled in the great Hall of the Palace and took the ſaid Oath, which was afterwards taken by the Princeſs Eliſabeth, and after her by all the Miniſters, Generals, Colleges, Tribunals, and all the Officers of the Court; that on the 8th Prince John was proclaim'd Great Prince of Ruſſia; and that the Princeſs Ann has taken the Title of Imperial Highneſs, as Mother to the preſumptive Heir of the Crown.

They add, that there are ſome other Meaſures which are to be taken out of hand, ſuch as the Nomination of the Regency during Prince John's Minority; and that 'tis already known that the Duke of Brunſwick his Father is to be Generaliſſimo of the Army, and to take place as ſuch in the Council of the Regency, in which 'tis ſaid the Princeſs Ann is alſo to aſſiſt, together with the Count D'Oſterman, the Vice Marſhal de Munich, and the other Miniſters of the Cabinet; That the Gout, with which the Czarina has been afflicted, is fallen down to her Feet; That the Squadron which was cruizing in the Baltick under Admiral Obrian is return'd to Cronſtadt, where it is unrigging; and, That the Regiments which the Court had ſent to the Frontiers of Finland are marching into their Winter Quarters about Peterſburg and the Lake Ladoga.

They write from Vienna of the 4th Inſt. N. S. that the Eſtates of Auſtria are to pay their Homage to the Queen of Hungary on the 23d Inſtant, and that 'tis believ'd ſhe will be crown'd at Preſburgh towards the End of the Year; that the Counts de Colloredo and Kuſſtein will ſhortly be ſent to ſeveral of the Electors and Princes of the Empire, with ſpecial Commiſſions relating to the preſent Situation of Affairs; that 'tis ſaid the Queen of Hungary intends to aſſociate the Great Duke of Tuſcany her Huſband in the Royalty, but that ſhe will not be crown'd Queen of Bohemia till after ſhe has lain in; that Commiſſions will ſhortly be iſſued for augmenting the Troops, and that the Officers are ſetting out from thence for their reſpective Regiments; that the Bavarian Miniſter has given a certain Declaration to the Miniſters there, from the Elector his Maſter, which is not made publick; that the Great Chancellor the Count de Sinzendorff and the Count de Kevenhuller the Bohemian Miniſter at the Dyet of Ratiſbon, will be nominated by the Queen as her Ambaſſadors for the Electorate of Bohemia to the Aſſembly that is to be held at Francfort for the Choice of an Emperor; and that they talk more than ever of a ſpeedy Marriage between the Archdutcheſs Mary Anne and the Electoral Prince of Bavaria.

They write from Stockholm, Oct. 26 N. S. that Orders are ſent to Finland to put the Troops there into Winter Quarters; that the King has iſſu'd an Edict, which prohibits any Correſpondence to be held during the enſuing Dyet, with Foreign Countries, as to the Matters which ſhall be propoſed or debated in the ſaid Aſſembly; and that the Poſtmaſters are to ſtop all Letters from private Perſons which they ſhall ſuſpect of ſuch Correſpondence, ſo that none will be ſuffer'd to paſs freely but thoſe of Publick Miniſters.

From Berlin of the 8 h Inſt. N. S. th t the King of Pruſſia has order'd 10 Battalions and 10 Squadrons more to be rais'd, and all his Magazines to be well ſtor'd; that they are aſſur'd from Paris, that a Courier is ſent from Fontainbleau to Vienna, with Orders to the French Ambaſſador to declare to the Queen of Hungary and Bohemia, that his Majeſty will ſtrictly perform the Engagement which he enter'd into for the Guaranty of the Pragmatick Sanction by the 10th Article of the Treaty of Peace betwixt the King, the Emperor and the Empire, which was ſign'd at Vienna in 1739

Letters of the 25th ult. from Madrid ſay, that the King has had another Fit of his Fever; and that a Courier from St. Andero has brought Advice, that the five Men of War which ſail'd lately from thence for America had ſuffer'd ſo much by a violent Storm, that they could not proceed on their Voyage, and were return'd to the Bay of Biſcay. Six Men of War were juſt fitted out at Cadiz and ready to ſail.

To the AUTHOR.

SIR,

BY the Steadineſs of the Price of Tickets, it ſeems as if there was a Struggle between the Publick and the Engroſſers. The Publick have hitherto prevented the Jobbers from playing the ſame Game they did laſt Year, by with-holding their Orders till a proper Time.

The Engroſſers, perceiving that there is no Demand, refrain ſending their Tickets to Market; by which Means there are as yet but very few circulated into the Hands of thoſe that intend to ſtand them. The Nominal Price they have the Modeſty to fix at 5 l. and, for the preſent, there is an Inactivity or Suſpence of dealing in them: The Truth of which every Body may be convinc'd of, that will take the Trouble of attending Exchange-Alley any Day in the Week.

They have furniſh'd themſelves with Money, by way of Loan, till the 10th of December, or the Day before the Drawing; at which Time their Mortgag'd Tickets muſt be redeem'd. And in all Likelihood thoſe that will wait till then, will have an Opportunity of playing at Par, by purchaſing at 4 l. 5 s. as without doubt above 40000 muſt be then expoſed to Sale.

The Brokers and Jobbers in Exchange-Alley being more deeply concern'd in this Lottery than they were in the laſt, will keep a good Look-out, to know what Orders are ſent by thoſe that live at a Diſtance from London to their Correſpondents in Town; which if they find to be poſitive for buying on the 10th of December, or the Day before the Drawing, without Limitation of Price, thoſe Gentlemen who cabal together, and compare Notes, will unqueſtionably ſettle the Price of their Commodity accordingly; but ſhould they be convinced that People will not be concern'd unleſs they can purchaſe for 2 or 3 Shilling above 4 l 5 s. the Engroſſers muſt then ſubmit to learn Experience at their own Coſt, and own that Honeſty and Plain Common Senſe has got the better of Craft, &c. I am,

SIR, Your's, &c

A Well Wiſher to the Publick.

The following is a true Scheme of the Lottery, the deducting 15 per Cent. for Weſtminſter Bridge.

Number of Prizes.	Value of each.	Total Value
Prizes above 85 l. beſides the firſt and laſt drawn. 2	of 8500 l.	is 17000
2	4250	8500
2	2550	5100
4	1700	6800
20	850	17000
30	425	12750
60 Prizes.
200	85	17000
500	42 10s.	21000
4200	17	71400
11550	8 10s.	92400
	First drawn	425
	Laſt drawn	85
16510 Prizes.		365960
48490 Blanks.
65000

This laſt Sum (276250 l.) is abſolutely all the Money play'd for, 48750 l. being given towards building the Bridge; which makes up the 325000 allowed by Parliament to be raiſed by this Lottery.

N. B. By the above Scheme it does appear, that there are but 62 Prizes of upwards of 85 l. ſo that it is 1048 to 1, that an Adventurer is not a Gainer more than 85 l. after deducting the Coſt of a Ticket.

Should an Adventurer have his Proportion of the Prizes, his Account will ſtand thus:

4 Tickets, bought at 5 l.		20
1 Prize of		8
Loſs		12

But if he has the good Luck to have a Prize of 17 l. which is 16 to 1 he has not, his great Success will then leave him only 3 l. out of Pocket; viz.

4 Tickets, at 5 l. coſt		20
1 Prize		17
Loſs only		3
